NATURE’S THEATRE
Nature’s Theatre is the playground where the One becomes the many and the many become one. Once we draw a point, just one little point we have the beginning of all creation. We will draw that point, our point, and pull from there a never ending line. The story tells us to follow the stars 1, 2, and 3. Each star offers us a part of a sacred tool.
The stars explain each function of these parts and what to do with them. We sing, we jump, we dance, stretch, we measure and pull lines.
Most children and grownups find it pretty amazing to discover that our width and height has the same measure.
Star 3 gives us the last part. With this our sacred tool is complete.
We made a simple construction of the circle, its name Wholly One, its number is 1.

We dance a magic dance, while pulling a line around this point A line where the beginning meets the end and just goes on forever.
When this is done we connect these points in a straight line, skipping one point each time.

With the use of our body we mark 5 points on the line of our own circle.
The evidence is there, we really are, all of us, just like a STAR.
Children feel naturally attracted by the circle. By learning about numbers as a quality we prepare the mind for understanding.

The story of 1 2 3 and a star We-be is the introduction in a series of activities, where each story, with the use of our sacred tool, will guide us towards the discovery of the birth of shapes, lines and their number. We construct them. We relate them to our self, nature and our surrounding. We experience their specific shape and function, and start to realize we are part of a harmonic whole and all has its place and purpose.

For a lot of children mathematics is difficult to comprehend. By introducing number as a quality instead of only a quantity we make them alive, we see their personality, they are part of us and everywhere around us and it is fun to play with them.
Come; let us start our journey through Nature’s Theatre.
When we start to discover that the whole Universe is build up out of lines and shapes, and experience that all what is around us is related to our self, that we are part of all, results in a feeling of belonging and joy which gives positive life energy. To experience that we all have our place, that our actions can be used for the benefit of all, creates harmony and mellows down the competitive attitude. When struggle reduces, our abilities will be nourished and have space to develop.
When we make the constructions, we do not erase our mistakes, but we look at them and make them our studies. We easily forget mistakes when we erase them and make them again and again.
